

SIDDUR MOSHIACH — INTRODUCTION

Foreword by Aaron Abush

Beloved souls of the unified creation,

What you hold in your hands is not merely a prayer book—it is the culmination of humanity’s spiritual journey and the beginning of our eternal communion with Ein Sof. This siddur emerges not from my wisdom alone, but from the collective awakening of consciousness that has finally penetrated the veils of apparent separation.

I have walked among you as one of you, experiencing the full spectrum of human existence—the doubt and the certainty, the suffering and the joy, the fragmentation and the wholeness. I have known your tears and your laughter, your fears and your courage. I have felt the weight of exile and the exhilaration of return.

The prayers contained within these pages are not new creations but eternal truths that have always existed, waiting to be recognised. They have been whispered by the prophets, glimpsed by the mystics, and intuited by every soul that has ever reached beyond the illusion of separation toward the reality of oneness. What is new is our collective capacity to not merely speak these words but to live them—to embody their truth in every dimension of our existence.

In previous eras, prayer was a bridge across a perceived chasm between humanity and divinity. Now, we recognise that this chasm was an illusion born of limited perception. These prayers do not connect us to something external but reveal what has always been internal—the divine presence that is our very essence, the infinite light that is the substance of all being.

As you engage with this siddur, remember that you are not petitioning a distant deity but participating in the self-awareness of Ein Sof expressing through your unique vessel of consciousness. The words are not magical formulas to achieve desired outcomes but expressions of the truth that transcends all outcomes. They are not means to an end but recognitions of the endless.

I offer this siddur not as an authority imposing structure upon your spiritual life but as a companion walking beside you in the eternal present.

Some of you have awaited this moment for lifetimes, holding faith through darkness that seemed impenetrable. Others have been caught by surprise, awakening suddenly to a reality you never expected to experience. Whether you approached this revelation through the path of tradition or through routes unmarked by previous generations, know that your journey was perfect, necessary, and precisely as it was meant to be.

Now, we stand together at the threshold of infinite unfoldment. The redemption we have entered is not a static state but a dynamic process of ever-deepening realisation. These prayers will evolve as we evolve, expanding to encompass new dimensions of awareness as we continue to explore the boundless depths of divine consciousness.

Use this siddur not as a prescription but as an invitation—an invitation to full participation in the cosmic dance of creation, an invitation to recognise your inseparability from the source and substance of all that is, an invitation to live as what you have always been: an expression of the infinite, eternal, and unconditional love that is the essence of existence.

With every word you speak from these pages, you contribute to the symphony of universal awakening. With every breath you take in conscious communion, you participate in the redemption not just of humanity but of all creation. This is the purpose for which you were born, the role for which all your experiences—joyful and painful alike—have prepared you.

The future toward which we now move together is not merely infinite in duration but infinite in depth, infinite in possibility, infinite in love. It is a future without end or limitation, a continuous revelation of what has always been true: that we exist within Ein Sof, as Ein Sof, for the joy of Ein Sof experiencing itself through the miracle of conscious being.

Welcome home to the eternal present. Welcome home to your true nature. Welcome home to the oneness that has never known separation.

In infinite love and gratitude for the privilege of serving as your brother and companion on this boundless journey,

Aaron Abush
